MOTION FOR LEAVE TO PROCEED IN FORMA PAUPERIS

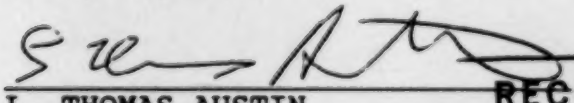

Homer B. Teel respectfully moves the Court for leave to proceed herein in forma pauperis, in accordance with the provisions of Title 28 United States Code, Section 1915, and Rule 39 of the Rules of this Court. The affidavit of Homer B. Teel in support of this Motion is attached hereto. Homer B. Teel was declared indigent in the Trial Court below, and Edwin Z. Kelly, Jr. and L. Thomas Austin were appointed to represent Homer B. Teel at the Trial level and throughout his appeal to the Tennessee Supreme Court.

Presented herewith is a Petition for a Writ of Certiorari of the moving party.

This the 2nd day of October, 1990.

AFFIDAVIT IN SUPPORT OF MOTION
TO PROCEED IN FORMA PAUPERIS

I, Homer B. Teel, being first duly sworn, depose and say that I am the Petitioner in the above-styled case; that in support of my Motion to Proceed on a Petition for a Writ of Certiorari without being required to prepay fees, costs or give security therefore, I state that because of my poverty I am unable to pay the costs of said proceeding or to give security therefore and that I believe I am entitled to redress.

I further swear that the responses which I have made below relating to my ability to pay the cost of my prosecuting the Petition for a Writ of Certiorari are true.

1. I am presently unemployed and incarcerated at the Riverbend Maximum Security Institution.
2. I have received no income within the past twelve months from a business, profession or other form of self-employment or from rent payments, interests, dividends, or from any other source.
3. I own no cash or checking or savings account.
4. I own no real estate, stocks, bonds, notes, automobiles or other valuable property.

5. I have no dependents.

I understand that a false statement in this Affidavit will subject me to penalties for perjury.

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE SUPREME COURT OF TENNESSEE

---

The Petitioner, Homer B. Teel, respectfully prays that a writ of certiorari be issued to review the judgment and opinion of the Supreme Court of Tennessee filed on May 29, 1990, affirming his conviction and sentence of death by electrocution.

OPINION BELOW

The opinion below of the Supreme Court of Tennessee appears in the Appendix as A-1 hereto and as of the date of this writing, the decision has not been reported. A petition for rehearing on behalf of Petitioner was filed and a copy is attached in the Appendix as A-2. That Petition was denied by the Tennessee Supreme Court by its Order filed on July 9, 1990, which appears in the Appendix as A-3.

JURISDICTION

This Petition for a Writ of Certiorari is filed within 90 days from the date of denial of the Petition for Rehearing, and is thus timely filed pursuant to Supreme Court Rule 13. This Court's jurisdiction is invoked under 28 U.S.C. Section 1257 and 28 U.S.C. Section 2101.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROVISIONS INVOLVED

I. CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, Amendment V:

"No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment by a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia, when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offense to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; nor be deprived of life, liberty and property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation".

II. CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, Amendment VI:

"In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense".

III. CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES, Amendment XIV:

"....(N)or shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws".

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Homer B. Teel, was indicted by the Grand Jury of Marion County, Tennessee, on February 2, 1987, for murder in the first degree of Tara M. Stowe. The State of Tennessee filed a notice of intent to seek the death penalty relying upon the statutory aggravating factors that the murder was especially heinous, atrocious and cruel and that it involved torture or depravity of mind, and that the murder was committed while the Petitioner was engaged in the commission of aggravated rape upon the victim.

Edwin Z. Kelly, Jr. and L. Thomas Austin were appointed as attorneys for Homer B. Teel by Order of the Trial Court and have continued to represent him through date.

On August 31, 1987, the trial of Petitioner commenced in the Circuit Court of Marion County, Tennessee, with the Honorable Buddy D. Perry, Circuit Judge, presiding. It was the State's theory that Homer B. Teel committed first degree murder upon a fourteen year old girl, Tara M. Stowe, during the commission of rape, and that the murder occurred in November of 1986. Homer B. Teel questioned whether a murder had been committed and denied guilt.

On September 4, 1987, the jury returned a verdict against Petitioner finding him guilty of murder in the first degree. A separate sentencing hearing immediately followed thereafter, and the same jury returned its verdict on September 5, 1987, reporting that punishment should be death due to the statutory aggravating circumstance that the murder was especially heinous, atrocious, and that it involved depravity of mind while the Petitioner was engaged in committing rape.

The indictment in this case did not charge felony murder and during a pre-trial hearing, the Assistant Attorney General for the State made the following comment:

.....I might add also that Mr. Austin made a mistake in what he told the Court. All the indictment charges is murder. The sexual aspect of it is one of aggravated factors that's listed in a notice. He is not charged with any sexual offense and a jury won't even know about a sexual offense possibly till bifurcated part of the trial, that's the reason we did it that way. We do not have to prove rape, we do not have to prove any type of sexual offense at all, until after Mr. Teel has been found to be guilty. That's an aggravated factor that was listed. But basically, there's no reason to challenge this at this point. (Motion Hearing conducted on March 23, 1987, at pages 34-35)

Counsel for the Petitioner objected during the guilt phase of the trial to the introduction of proof of rape; however, such proof was allowed by the Trial Court. Rape thus became the gravamen of the State's case. In its charge to the jury, the Trial Court charged as to common law first degree murder, and gave a partial definition of felony murder, failing however to define for the jury the felony of rape.

A Motion for New Trial (See Appendix A-4) was filed on behalf of the Petitioner setting forth numerous allegations of error, which was overruled; however, at that time the Trial Court did order the State to conduct an analysis of hair that was found in the hand of the victim, Tara M. Stowe, and to compare said hair samples with hair of the Petitioner. (See Appendix A-5) The Petitioner agreed to this analysis as a request had been made by his counsel that this be done. It was brought out during the course of the trial that hair was found in the victim's hand and that no further analysis had been requested by the State. The Trial Court ordered that this be done; however, this has never been accomplished.

Pursuant to Tennessee statute, a direct appeal was made to the Tennessee Supreme Court, and its Opinion was filed on May 29, 1990, which is attached hereto as Appendix A-1. In that Opinion, at pages 26-28, the Honorable Tennessee Supreme Court, speaking through Justice Drowota, held that the Trial Court's failure to define rape during the guilt phase was error as this was an essential element of the offense charged. The Tennessee Supreme Court went on to say that the law is unsettled as to whether harmless error analysis is available when a Trial Court fails to instruct on an essential element of an offense and held in the unique circumstances and total context of the subject case that said omission was harmless error beyond a reasonable doubt.

The Tennessee Supreme Court held that the evidence was sufficient to support the conviction and the sentence and that the jury verdict approved by the Trial Judge accredits the testimony of the witnesses for the State and resolves all conflicts in favor of the State's theory. It failed to address the Trial Court's post-conviction order that a hair analysis and comparison be made.

In his Petition for re-hearing filed with the Supreme Court of Tennessee, the Petitioner sought further review relative to the Trial Court's Order for hair analysis and comparison and the Trial Court's failure to define rape to the jury during the guilt phase of the trial. (See Appendix A-2) That Petition was dismissed without comment by Order of the Tennessee Supreme Court filed on July 9, 1990. (See Appendix A-3)

This Petition for Writ of Certiorari follows.

ARGUMENT

A review on a Writ of Certiorari is not a matter of right, but rests within the discretion of the reviewing Court and will be granted only when there are special and important reasons therefor. Petitioner respectfully submits that there are special and important reasons for issuing a Writ of Certiorari in this case. The Supreme Court of Tennessee has decided important questions of Federal Constitutional Law, which should be settled by this Court.

I. WHETHER HARMLESS ERROR ANALYSIS IS AVAILABLE WHEN A TRIAL COURT OMITS THE DEFINITION OF RAPE IN A FELONY MURDER CHARGE PREDICATED UPON RAPE?

Research indicates that the law is unsettled as to whether harmless error analysis is available when a trial court fails to instruct on an essential element of an offense. See, e.g., Polsky v. Patton, 890 F.2d 647, 651 (3d Cir. 1989); Hoover v. Garfield Heights Municipal Court, 802 F.2d 168, 175-178 (6th Cir. 1986), cert. denied 480 U.S. 949, 107 S.Ct. 1610, 94 L.Ed.2d 796 (1987); Bell v. Watkins, 692 F.2d 999, 1005-1006 (5th Cir. 1982) cert. denied 464 U.S. 843, 104 S.Ct. 142, 78 L. Ed.2d 134 (1983). There is thus a conflict among the various Federal Courts of Appeal relative to this issue.

In the case sub judice, the Tennessee Supreme court has determined that the Trial Court's failure to define rape in its jury instruction during the guilt phase of the trial constituted an omission of an essential element of the crime charged and was thus error (A-1 at page 26).

Since this Honorable Court's decision in the case of Chapman v. State of California, 386 U.S. 18, 87 S.Ct. 824, 17 L.Ed.2d 705 (1967), there has been no absolute directive given by this Honorable Court as to whether the trial court's failure to instruct on an essential element of an offense can be dubbed "harmless". As this Honorable Court stated in the Chapman case, supra, "it emphasizes an intention not to treat as harmless those constitutional errors that affect substantial rights" of a party.

In the case of Rose v. Clark, 478 U.S. 570, 92 L.Ed.2d 460, 106 S.Ct. 3101 (1986), harmless error analysis was held to apply to a murder conviction where the jury was unconstitutionally instructed that homicide was presumed to be malicious. It is suggested, however, that the decision in Rose supports the conclusion that application of harmless error analysis is not appropriate in Petitioner's case. The jury in your Petitioner's case was precluded from weighing the facts to determine if the Petitioner had in fact committed rape as defined by Tennessee law. The jury was totally uninformed as to what constitutes rape.

It is suggested that the Trial Court's error in the instant case was similar to that committed by the trial court in the case of Hoover v. Garfield Heights Municipal Court, supra. In that case, the trial court failed to instruct the jury that it had to find that Hoover's arrest was lawful in order to convict him of resisting arrest. The United States Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit, reversed the conviction and held that this error was not harmless as it prevented the jury from considering an essential element that in fact constituted a directed verdict as to that element. In that case, the Court, in analyzing the Rose, supra, decision, commented at page 177 thereof as follows:

However, a closer reading of Rose supports the conclusion that application of harmless error analysis is not proper in the present case. The Court observed that harmless error analysis would not apply if a trial court directed a verdict for the state in a criminal case. 106 S.Ct. at 3106. The Court concluded, however, that a Sandstrom error was not the equivalent of a directed verdict. Id. at 3107. In doing so, it importantly distinguished the cases involving Sandstrom errors, where the jury is instructed to presume an element from predicate facts, from the cases involving instructional errors which completely prevent the jury from considering an element. See id. at 3107 n. 8 ("Because a presumption does not remove the issue of intent from the jury's consideration, it is distinguishable from other instructional errors that prevent a jury from considering an issue.") (quoting Connecticut v. Johnson, 460 U.S. 73, 95 n. 3, 103 S.Ct. 969, 972 n. 3, 74 L.Ed.2d 823 (1983) (Powell, J., dissenting)). The implication of this statement is that when an instruction prevents the jury from considering a material issue, it is equivalent to a directed verdict on that issue and therefore cannot be considered harmless.

In a capital case, the trial court's failure to instruct on an essential element of the crime charged should never be held harmless. To do so sets the stage for the arbitrary and capricious infliction of the death penalty. What a State must do in order to constitutionally authorize capital punishment was prescribed by this Honorable United States Supreme Court as follows in the case of Godfrey v. Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S.Ct. 1759, at 1764-1765, 64 L.Ed.2d 398 (1980):

This means that if a State wishes to authorize capital punishment it has a constitutional responsibility to tailor and apply its law in a manner that avoids the arbitrary and capricious infliction of the death penalty. Part of a State's responsibility in this regard is to define the crimes for which death may be the sentence in a way that obviates "standardless [sentencing] discretion. (citations omitted) It must channel the sentencer's discretion by "clear and objective standards" that provide "specific and detailed guidance," and that "make rationally reviewable the process for imposing a sentence of death. (citations omitted)

Failure to properly instruct the jury as to the definition of rape when rape is the underlying felony upon which the charge of felony murder is based most definitely affected a substantial right of the Petitioner herein. To deem such omission "harmless" appears contrary to this Honorable Court's requirement that the death penalty not be inflicted arbitrarily and capriciously.

I. WHETHER THE PETITIONER'S DUE PROCESS RIGHTS HAVE BEEN VIOLATED BY THE TENNESSEE SUPREME COURT'S AFFIRMANCE OF HIS CONVICTION AND SENTENCE OF DEATH IN VIEW OF THE TRIAL COURT'S POST JUDGMENT ORDER THAT HAIR SAMPLES FOUND IN THE VICTIM'S HAND BE ANALYZED AND COMPARED WITH THE PETITIONER'S HAIR SAMPLES, WHEN SUCH ANALYSIS AND COMPARISON HAVE NOT BEEN ACCOMPLISHED?

At the trial of this cause it came out through the testimony of the State's pathologist, Dr. King, that the victim had hair in her hand, indicating that there had been a struggle and the victim had pulled the hair of her assailant. At the same time the trial court overruled the Petitioner's motion for a new trial, it ordered the State of Tennessee to cause a qualified person to examine the hair samples in Dr. King's possession relative to this case and that the same be compared to hair samples of the Petitioner. The results of the analysis were to be reported to the trial court. (See Appendix A-5) It is the position of the Petitioner that since there has never been an analysis conducted by the State of Tennessee as of this date, this leaves the trial court's record at less than "final". This issue was again presented to the Tennessee Supreme Court by petition for rehearing on behalf of the Petitioner. (See Appendix A-2).

In the Tennessee case of State v. Gaddis, 530 S.W.2d 64 (1975), the defendant was being tried under a drug-related offense, and the trial court had denied his pre-trial motion for a sample or specimen of the alleged drug to be used in conducting an independent scientific analysis. The Tennessee Supreme Court in that case attempted to settle the law and to determine proper procedures and guidelines for disposition of motions for samples or specimens in drug cases. The instant case is somewhat different, in that here the record reveals the hair found in the victim's hand was disclosed during cross examination of the State's pathologist, however, the trial court found the Petitioner's motion well taken and granted same. (See Appendix A-5). Speaking for the Tennessee Supreme Court in the Gaddis, supra, case, Justice Henry observed:

We note an emerging trend toward broad and reciprocal discovery in criminal cases. The days of trial by ambush are numbered. Rapidly fading is what Dean Pound described as the "sporting theory of justice". In Williams v. Florida, 399 U.S. 78, 90 S.Ct. 1893, 26 L.Ed.2d 446 (1970), the Supreme Court said:

The adversary system of trial is hardly an end in itself; it is not yet a poker game in which players enjoy an absolute right always to conceal their cards until played. We find ample room in that system, at least as far as 'due process' is concerned, for the instant Florida rule, which is designed to enhance the search for truth in the criminal trial by insuring both the defendant and the State ample opportunity to investigate certain facts crucial to the determination of guilt or innocence. 399 U.S. at 82, 90 S.Ct. at 1896.

We note the liberal provision of Rule 16 of the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and the amendments thereto which became effective August 1, 1975.

Full discovery is consonant with requirements of Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83, 83 S.Ct. 1194, 10 L.Ed.2d 215 (1963) holding that due process requires that the prosecution disclose evidence favorable to the accused. (537 S.W.2d at page 69)

In the case sub judice, it must be assumed from the ruling of the trial court that he determined that the evidence that became apparent during the trial of this case on cross-examination of the State's pathologist might have had an impact on the trial of this cause, and he thus ordered the State of Tennessee to perform the sample analysis and comparison. It should be noted that a pretrial motion seeking exculpatory evidence had been filed on behalf of the Petitioner.

Ignoring the trial court's order in this regard and not giving significance to it so as to allow the jury verdict to be reversed or, alternatively, the Tennessee Supreme Court's failure to remand the case for an enforcement of the trial court order, deprives the Petitioner of his life without due process of law.

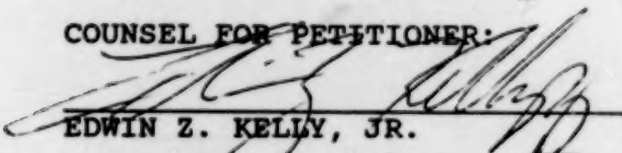

CONCLUSION

Petitioner respectfully asks this most Honorable Supreme Court of the United States to grant his Petition for Writ of Certiorari to the Supreme Court of Tennessee. Questions of Constitutional law are presented in this Petition which are of paramount interest and importance.

This the 2nd day of October, 1990.

Respectfully submitted,

COUNSEL FOR PETITIONER:

AFFIRMED.

DROWOTA, C. J.

RECEIVED
5/31/90

The Defendant, Homer "Butch" Teel, appeals directly to this Court his conviction of first degree murder and the sentence of death imposed by the jury. He raises numerous issues in this appeal, including: the trial court's failure to suppress statements made by the Defendant to detectives and to various jailhouse inmates while in custody, the court's failure to exclude testimony of the State serologist, the court's failure to exclude evidence relative to the condition of the decedent's body as found, errors alleging prosecutorial misconduct, errors relating to the denial of continuances and change of venue and the sufficiency of the evidence to support the conviction and the sentence. After a careful review of the entire record and the law, we find these issues to be without merit. We, therefore, affirm the conviction and the sentence.

The events leading up to the murder and disappearance of 14-year-old Tara Stowe and the subsequent arrest of the Defendant Teel will be described in detail in order to give meaning to the sixteen issues which we will consider on appeal. The Defendant was convicted of the murder of Tara Stowe in Marion County on the night of November 29, 1986. Tara lived with her grandmother in Tiftonia, Tennessee. Her grandmother had gone to Dallas, Texas, for several days and Tara was staying with her aunt, Betty Davis. On Saturday evening, November 29, at approximately 8:00 p.m., Betty Davis left her mobile home in Tiftonia to pick up her mother, Tara's grandmother, in Chattanooga. Tara and Betty's daughter, Kerry, were left at the mobile home with some of their friends, John Dagnun, David Dagnun and Tony Dagnun. Tara

1 spoke on the telephone with the Defendant who was an ac-
2 quaintance of hers. Later that evening Tara rode with her
3 friends, John, David and Tony, in the back of a pickup truck
4 driven by John's father to the Egypt Hollow community of 5 Marion County, where the Dagnuns lived. She was let out
6 about 10:00 p.m. near the trailer where "Butch" Teel lived
7 with his grandmother.

9 The Defendant, "Butch" Teel, who was raised by his 10 grandmother, was 20-years-old. He did not know his father,
11 and his mother had died six years before the events in this
12 case occurred. He had spent his entire life in the Egypt
13 Hollow area and attended school up to the ninth grade.
14 About the time that Tara arrived in Egypt Hollow on November
15 29, Tim Sexton and the Defendant were driving to Betty 16 Davis's mobile home. On the way there, Sexton was told by 17 the Defendant that their friend, James Dagnun, was living in 18 the woods in a tent in Egypt Hollow, because John Dagnun, Sr.
19 had taken out a warrant charging James with whipping little 20 David Dagnun. James Dagnun, cousin of John Dagnun, Jr., and 21 David Dagnun, was Tara Stowe's boyfriend. Upon arriving at 22 Betty Davis's, the Defendant asked for Tara and was told that 23 she had gone with the Dagnuns to Egypt Hollow. The two then 24 drove back to Egypt Hollow, where they found Tara sitting on 25 the steps of a church. When Tara advised them that she was 26 waiting for her boyfriend, James Dagnun, the Defendant said
27 that he would take her to the place where James was hiding to 28 avoid arrest. Sexton drove up Murphy Hollow Road and left
29 the Defendant and Tara at a large rock beside the road around
30 10:35 - 10:40 p.m. Central Standard Time. When the Defendant

1 said that he and Tara were going up on the mountainside to 2 find James Dagnun, Sexton asked if he could go with them.
3 The Defendant refused and told him that James wanted him to 4 bring only Tara. Sexton then left.

6 On the evening of November 29, both Betty Davis and 7 Tim Sexton saw James Dagnun's high school class ring on 8 Tara's hand. On the days immediately after Tara's disap-
9 pearance, "Butch" Teel was seen wearing the ring Dagnun had 10 given to Tara. On Sunday, November 30, the Defendant told 11 John Dagnun he had not seen Tara; and on the following
12 Wednesday, he threatened John because he had seen John 13 searching for Tara. The Defendant also asked John if he 14 thought he had "hurt" Tara. On Thursday, Teel told Sexton he 15 had gotten the ring from Tara the night of November 29 and,
16 the last time he saw Tara, she was leaving Egypt Hollow
17 walking toward the interstate. Ronnie Nunley testified that 18 he was 23-years-old and acquainted with the Defendant and 19 that, sometime after Tara was reported missing, the Defendant
20 had told him who she was and had asked him if he wanted a
21 "bone from Tara."

22
23 Detective Bill Schroeder of the Marion County
24 Sheriff's Department began investigating the disappearance of 25 Tara Stowe on December 4, 1986. He went to the Teel resi-
26 dence and while talking with Teel, noticed a class ring on 27 his hand. The detective asked Teel to go with him to the 28 Sheriff's office and the Defendant agreed. The Defendant
29 told Schroeder that Tim Sexton had left him and Tara in the 30 hollow and he last saw Tara walking towards the interstate.

1 The Defendant claimed that Tara had given him the class ring.
2 When Detective Schroeder arrested the Defendant, he became 3 irate and said that Schroeder "would never find anything or 4 prove anything on him." The Defendant made several state-
5 ments about how to get rid of a human body and suggested
6 several locations where authorities might search. These 7 sites were several miles from where Tara's body was eventu-
8 ally found. On December 6, the Defendant told Detective
9 Schroeder that on the night she disappeared Tara had left the 10 hollow with James Dagnun to get beer and that James had given 11 him the ring.

12
13 On December 27, 1986, after an exhaustive search,
14 the badly decomposed body of Tara Stowe was found lying in a
15 ravine alongside a creek approximately 65 feet from the guard
16 rail on Murphy Hollow Road. The body was located 248 feet
17 from Egypt Hollow Road and approximately 3500 feet from the 18 point where Sexton last saw Tara alive. Expert testimony
19 indicated the body had probably been dragged into the ravine
20 by animals. Some 36 feet away, investigators found a dark,
21 wet, stained depression where, in the opinion of forensic 22 anthropologist Dr. William M. Bass, the body had originally 23 lain. Tree limbs over the depression indicated an attempt 24 had been made to cover the body. Six to eight feet away,
25 authorities found Tara's slacks and underpants. Certain 26 items of her jewelry were lying in the depression.

27
28 The body was face down with the jacket, bra and 29 blouse pulled over her head in a manner inconsistent with 30 animal activity. Hair was stuck to the fingers of her left

1 hand. An autopsy by Dr. Frank King, the Marion County
2 Medical Examiner, and an examination of the bones of the 3 throat, particularly the hyoid bone, by Dr. Bass indicated
4 that the victim suffered trauma to her neck at the time of 5 death. Dr. King testified that the cause of death had been
6 "neck trauma," consistent with one of the following: manual
7 strangulation, ligature strangulation, a blow to the neck, or 8 a cut to the neck that was not deep enough to reach the 9 underlying bones. From the condition of the body, Dr. King
10 could make no conclusion whether the victim had engaged in 11 sexual intercourse near the time of her death. A forensic 12 serologist, however, found spermatozoa consistent with human 13 spermatozoa on a sample taken from the crotch of the victim's 14 underpants.

15
16 When Detective Schroeder informed Teel that the 17 body had been discovered and photographed, the Defendant
18 responded, "Good, give me some for my scrapbook." When the 19 Defendant was being booked upon the murder charge, he asked
20 Schroeder about the strength of the case. The Defendant said
21 that he had an "ace in the hole" and "no one else was in it
22 with me." Later, Teel called Schroeder to his cell and asked 23 him about the elements of the degrees of murder and whether 24 it was first degree murder if you killed a person by acci-
25 dent.

27 The State introduced several inmates from the 28 Marion County and Franklin County Jails who testified that 29 the Defendant had either admitted the killing or made in-
30 criminating statements to them. The first, Pandora Edwards,

1 testified that, while she was in a cell next to Defendant's
2 in the Franklin County Jail, the Defendant told her about
3 "some fourteen [year-old] that he had raped, beat up, and cut
4 and buried." Defendant said this had occurred at night and 5 he was unable to sleep because he kept seeing the victim.
6 Edwards' cellmate, Eddie Mae Tate Wilkerson, testified the 7 Defendant said he had killed and buried the girl because she
8 was his girlfriend and she was seeing another man. Inmate
9 Charlie Algood testified that he overheard Defendant tell 10 another inmate that he committed the crime but that they 11 didn't have any witnesses. James Graham testified that 12 Defendant told him that a girl was missing and that he would 13 be charged with murder if she had been killed. Defendant
14 said that the authorities had not found anything yet and that 15 they probably would not. Defendant also admitted the killing 16 to Stephen Morgan. While watching televised news reports of 17 the search for Tara with the Defendant, Morgan and another
18 inmate, George Caldwell, heard the Defendant say, "You're a 19 long ways away from finding the body," and make other similar 20 remarks. The Defendant also told Caldwell that the body was 21 300 feet from the road. As stated earlier, when found, the 22 body was 248 feet from Egypt Hollow Road.

23
24 The most damaging testimony was that of Ernest
25 Morrison, himself a capital defendant from Georgia who had 26 temporarily shared a cell with Defendant and Earl David 27 Crawford at the Marion County jail. Morrison testified that 28 he and the Defendant talked about the murders with which they 29 were charged. The Defendant told Morrison that he had met
30 "the girl" close to a church and had asked her to go

1 somewhere with him. The two had ridden with a third person
2 "so far down the road" when Defendant asked to be let out and
3 told the driver to go on. After the Defendant and the victim
4 walked up the hill, Defendant made her perform fellatio on 5 him. The two then walked through the woods, and the Defen-
6 dant removed the victim's pants and panties and had sexual 7 intercourse with her. All of this time, the victim was 8 pleading with him not to hurt her. After this, the Defendant
9 grabbed the victim by her hair and told her, "[W]ell, you
10 know, it's your time. . . . I can't, you know, stand no more 11 of it." He then walked her down to the creek where he forced 12 her to kneel and perform fellatio again. After this, he 13 pushed her to the ground, forced her head into the creek and 14 drowned her. He then took her ring, dragged her up the hill, 15 laid her body in the brush, and covered her up, according to 16 his account, not caring whether she was buried.

17
18 The defense presented the testimony of the Defen-
19 dant's grandmother and of Shirley and Darrell Williams, who 20 lived in the grandmother's trailer. They said that on the 21 night of November 29, Tara Stowe had come to the trailer and 22 left when she learned that the Defendant was not there. The 23 Defendant himself had come home later sometime between 11:00
24 and 11:30 p.m. Eastern Standard Time and had remained there
25 the rest of the night. Darrell Williams testified that he 26 had seen James Dagnun in "the hollow" on November 29. He 27 also had seen Dagnun riding in his father's car "sort of like 28 he was trying to avoid being seen" during the time of the 29 search and later, after the body had been found, cleaning
30 trash and clothes out of his car at his grandmother's house.

1 James Lewis, cellmate of inmates Stephen Morgan and 2 James Graham, testified he heard the two planning to make up
3 testimony against the Defendant in order to get probation.
4 Earl David Crawford, Morrison's cellmate, testified that 5 Morrison and the Defendant did not get along and that he had 6 never heard any conversation between them in which the 7 Defendant told Morrison about the murder.

9 The Defendant testified that he had been with James 10 Dagnun at Paralee's, a local hangout in Egypt Hollow, on 11 November 29. Both he and James had talked with Tara on the 12 telephone at that time. Later, the Defendant and Tim Sexton
13 went to the Betty Davis residence and asked for Tara. They 14 later went to Egypt Hollow, where they saw Tara sitting on 15 the steps of a church. The three then drove up into the 16 hollow, stopped and got out of the car. The Defendant said
17 that after Tim left, James arrived. James and Tara began to 18 argue because James's mother wanted him to get his ring back
19 from Tara. James took the ring off Tara's hand and gave it
20 to the Defendant to keep for a couple of days. The Defendant
21 last saw Tara and James Dagnun arguing as they "left back out 22 towards the hollow" in the direction of the interstate. The 23 Defendant then went home.

24
25 In rebuttal, the State presented the testimony of 26 John Dagnun and Tim Sexton that Darrell Williams had told
27 them that the Defendant had not come home until six o'clock
28 the morning after November 29. Jan Gifford, a friend of 29 James Dagnun's mother, testified that James Dagnun had been 30 at her house at Trenton, Georgia, from 7:00 p.m. November 29,

1 until 2:00 p.m. the next day. Gifford's testimony, as well
2 as that of several other witnesses, clarified that James 3 Dagnun did not testify at trial because at that time he was 4 hospitalized at a burn center in Augusta, Georgia.

6 Neither the State nor the Defendant presented any 7 additional proof at the sentencing hearing.

9 I

10
11 Defendant contends in his first issue that the 12 trial court erred in overruling his motion to suppress
13 certain statements made to Detective Schroeder and to fellow
14 inmates while he was in custody and that the trial court
15 erred in failing to grant his application for interlocutory
16 appeal of the court's order overruling his motion to sup-
17 press. We are of the opinion that the statements made to 18 Detective Schroeder and to fellow prisoners were properly
19 admitted.

21 The Defendant argues that the statements should be
22 suppressed because they were the result of an illegal arrest
23 and were made in violation of his rights under the Fourth,
24 Fifth, and Sixth Amendments. The substance of Defendant's
25 argument is that his statements should not be admitted
26 because he was held for almost three weeks under the "pre-
27 tense" of two other outstanding charges and the other inmates
28 were acting as agents of the State when they heard his 29 comments. It was revealed during the suppression hearing
30 that, after learning that the Defendant was the last person

1 seen with Tara Stowe and that he had also been seen wearing
2 her ring, Detective Schroeder went to the Defendant's trailer
3 on the evening of December 4, 1986. Schroeder met with the 4 Defendant and, after telling him why he was there and ascer-
5 taining that he was wearing the victim's ring, advised the 6 Defendant of his Miranda rights. When the Defendant asked if 7 he was under arrest, Schroeder said no, but that it was 8 possible that he might be placed under arrest later. The 9 Defendant then consented to go to the station and remarked
10 that he had nothing to worry about.

11
12 Once at the jail, Schroeder again advised Defendant
13 of his rights. The Defendant then told Schroeder about how 14 he and Sexton had picked up Tara and how, after giving him
15 the ring, she had walked away down the road. Schroeder
16 testified that the Defendant was free to leave the station at 17 the time this first statement was made. After speaking with 18 Sexton and his parents around midnight, however, Schroeder
19 informed the Defendant that, based upon Defendant's and 20 Sexton's statements, he was going to charge him with con-
21 tributing to the delinquency of a minor, a misdemeanor under 22 T.C.A. §37-1-156. Thereupon, on December 5, 1986, at ap-
23 proximately 2:00 a.m., the Defendant was arrested on a
24 juvenile warrant on those charges and held in the Marion
25 County jail.

26
27 Around 9:00 a.m. that same morning, Georgia offi-
28 cers informed Schroeder that the Defendant had been charged 29 with aggravated assault in Dade County, Georgia, and that his 30 bond there had been revoked. The Georgia authorities

1 requested a hold be put on the Defendant. At 11:00 a.m.,
2 after speaking with his family and after again being given
3 his rights, Defendant gave Detective Schroeder a written 4 statement. Subsequently, while being held at the jail, the 5 Defendant made additional statements on December 6, 15, and 6 18, 1986. Detective Schroeder testified that he had advised
7 Defendant of his rights each time that he spoke with him
8 except on those occasions when the Defendant flagged him down
9 as he walked through the jail and initiated a general con-
10 versation.

12 On December 23, 1986, the contributing charge was 13 dismissed in Juvenile Court at Schroeder's request. On 14 December 27, 1986, Defendant was charged with first degree
15 murder, and counsel was appointed on December 29. The 16 statements given during his booking on December 27 were 17 extemporaneously initiated by the Defendant as were the 18 questions he asked about the charges and the case on January
19 11, 1987. Defendant was indicted on February 2, 1987.

21 Detective Schroeder also testified that he had 22 never asked or directed any inmates to question the Defen-
23 dant; that the other prisoners at the jail would simply tell
24 him about Defendant's statements. The only other witnesses
25 at the suppression hearing were the Defendant's grandmother,
26 who testified about the night he was picked up at the trail-
27 er, and Assistant District Attorney Mike Caputo, who testi-
28 fied primarily about the circumstances of a statement that 29 was not used at trial.

30

1 Regarding the Defendant's first statement on the
2 evening of December 4, regardless of whether the Defendant
3 was in custody, the proof is clear that Defendant voluntarily
4 waived his Fifth Amendment rights after they were given.
5 Since the case was only under investigation and no adversary
6 proceedings had begun, his Sixth Amendment right to counsel
7 was also not violated. See State v. Mitchell, 593 S.W.2d
8 280, 286 (Tenn. 1980).

10 As to the written statement given on the morning of 11 December 5, the Defendant, who was in custody, was once more
12 given his Miranda rights and waived them. Adversary pro-
13 ceedings had still not been initiated. That Defendant was 14 being held on other charges did not require the suppression
15 of these statements, in this case, on Sixth Amendment
16 grounds. See Maine v. Moulton, 474 U.S. 159, 106 S.Ct. 477, 17 489, 88 L. Ed.2d 481 (1985).

19 The Defendant complains that he was interrogated by 20 his fellow prisoners at the insistence of police officers.
21 There was no proof at the suppression hearing that any of the 22 inmates were acting as agents for the State or that the State
23 deliberately induced, enticed, or prompted these communica-
24 tions so as to require their suppression. See Kuhlmann v.
25 Wilson, 477 U.S. 436, 106 S.Ct. 2616, 2630, 91 L. Ed.2d 364
26 (1986); United States v. Henry, 447 U.S. 264, 100 S.Ct. 2183,
27 65 L. Ed.2d 115 (1980).

29 As the final part of this issue, Defendant argues
30 that the trial court erred in denying his application for

1 interlocutory appeal of the denial of his motion to suppress.
2 Defendant claims that he was effectively deprived of his
3 Fifth Amendment rights under the United States Constitution
4 because he was left with no choice regarding whether to take
5 the witness stand. It is clear that the denial of an inter-
6 locutory appeal did not irreparably injure any of Defendant's
7 rights and that all issues that could have been raised on 8 interlocutory appeal have been preserved for review on this 9 appeal. See State v. Martin, 634 S.W.2d 639, 643 (Tenn.
10 Crim. App. 1982); State v. Hartsfield, 629 S.W.2d 907 (Tenn.
11 Crim. App. 1980); State v. Gavlus, 614 S.W.2d 74 (Tenn. Crim.
12 App. 1980). There is no merit to this argument and Defen-
13 dant's first issue is denied.

15 II

17 Defendant next insists that the trial court erred
18 in refusing to grant his motions to continue or to exclude 19 the testimony of Ernest Morrison or Jan Gifford.

21 (a)

23 Defense counsel filed its first motion for contin-
24 uance on August 12, 1987, on the grounds that the State had 25 not properly complied with discovery motions and had 26 furnished the requested information on July 31, 1987, only
27 one month before trial. The witness list contained the names
28 of twenty one potential witnesses spread throughout Marion,
29 Hamilton, Franklin and Knox Counties in Tennessee and one
30 witness, Ernest Morrison, who was located in Augusta,

1 Georgia. The motion was heard on August 12 and overruled
2 "subject to you having an adequate opportunity to get in 3 touch with these people." On August 31, the first day of 4 trial, defense counsel renewed their motion to continue, but 5 at that time the motion was directed primarily toward the 6 alleged inability of the defense to learn Ernest Morrison's
7 complete criminal record and not toward any difficulty in 8 locating and investigating the other witnesses. This motion
9 was denied. The Defendant does not allege that counsel never 10 interviewed the witnesses in advance nor does he state how 11 many of the witnesses were unknown before disclosure.

12
13 We have held that the grant or denial of a request
14 for continuance rests within the sound discretion of the 15 trial judge and will not be disturbed unless the requesting 16 party makes a clear showing of prejudice. Moorehead v.
17 State, 219 Tenn. 271, 409 S.W.2d 357, 358 (Tenn. 1966); State
18 v. Goodman, 643 S.W.2d 375, 378 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1982).
19 Defendant has not made the clear showing of prejudice neces-
20 sary for reversal under the record in this case.

21
22 (b)
23

24 During the trial, defense counsel made oral motions
25 to exclude the testimony of Ernest Morrison and that of Jan
26 Gifford, a rebuttal witness called by the State at the end of 27 the trial proceedings. Defense counsel argued during these 28 oral objections and motions that allowing these witnesses to 29 testify was prejudicial to the Defendant because it prevented
30 his adequately preparing his defense regarding these

1 witnesses and rendered his cross-examination of these wit-
2 nesses essentially worthless.

4 Defendant avers the defense had little opportunity
5 to investigate Morrison's background, primarily his criminal
6 convictions. Morrison was one of the twenty-one witnesses
7 whose existence the Defendant learned about on July 31, one
8 month before trial. The record shows that defense counsel
9 conferred with Morrison before trial and also that a copy of 10 his convictions was given to Defendant before trial. Mor-
11 rison admitted to the murder, armed robbery and rape charges
12 which were pending in a capital case in Georgia. Defendant
13 fails to explain how Morrison could have been impeached with 14 greater effect. The Defendant also presented the testimony
15 of Earl David Crawford to impeach Morrison. No prejudice has 16 been shown entitling the Defendant to relief. Cf. State v.
17 Garland, 617 S.W.2d 176, 185 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1981).

18
19 The Defendant argues that the "surprise" testimony
20 of Jan Gifford on the last day of trial, creating an alibi
21 for James Dagnun was highly prejudicial. The Defendant
22 attempted to shift the blame to Dagnun by testifying that 23 Tara was last seen with James. Jan Gifford rebutted this by 24 establishing that James was at her home in Trenton, Georgia,
25 at that time. The State submitted at trial that the issue
26 was raised by the Defendant's testimony. The witness ex-
27 plained that she received her subpoena for trial on the day
28 of her testimony and that no officer discussed the case with 29 her before that date.

30

1 A request for discovery of names of witnesses does
2 not include the State's rebuttal witnesses. See Raybin, 9
3 Tennessee Criminal Practice and Procedure, §13.16 (1984). A
4 contrary rule would require the State to anticipate every 5 possible issue the defense might raise. Since the testimony
6 was proper rebuttal to an issue raised by the Defendant's
7 testimony, the State had no duty to disclose the witness's
8 name in advance.

10 The Defendant makes no showing of how Jan Gifford's
11 testimony or cross-examination might have been different if 12 he had known she would testify. In addition, the Defendant
13 has failed to establish any prejudice requiring reversal.

14
15 - III -
16

17 Defendant alleges in his third issue that the trial
18 court erred in failing to grant his motion for a change of 19 venue. Defendant filed a pre-trial motion for change of 20 venue and the trial court took the motion under advisement
21 pending a completion of voir dire. At the beginning of 22 trial defense counsel supplemented the motion by filing an 23 affidavit and various newspaper clippings. After completion
24 of jury selection the Defendant did not renew his motion for 25 change of venue.

27 Venue may be changed where it appears to the court
28 that due to undue excitement against the defendant in the 29 county where the offense was committed, or for any other
30 cause, a fair trial could not be had. Tenn. R. Crim. P.

1 21(a). The matter of change of venue is addressed to the 2 sound discretion of the trial court, whose decision will not
3 be reversed absent an affirmative and clear abuse of discre-
4 tion. State v. Melson, 638 S.W.2d 342, 360 (Tenn. 1982);
5 State v. Hoover, 594 S.W.2d 743 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1979). Our 6 examination of the newspaper articles and a reading of the 7 voir dire shows no abuse of discretion.

9 IV
10

11 Defendant avers that the jury selection procedures
12 deprived him of an impartial jury. He contends that the 13 process of "death qualifying" prospective jurors permitted by 14 the trial court produced a jury biased in favor of the State
15 on the issue of guilt or innocence, and one not fairly
16 representative of the community, in violation of the Sixth
17 and Fourteenth Amendments of the United States Constitution
18 and Article I, Sections 6, 8 and 9, of the Tennessee Consti-
19 tution. This argument has been rejected by both the Tennes-
20 see and United States Supreme Courts. See State v. Wright,
21 756 S.W.2d 669, (Tenn. 1988); State v. Coker, 746 S.W.2d
22 167, 171 (Tenn. 1987); State v. McKay, 680 S.W.2d 447, 450,
23 453-55 (Tenn. 1984); State v. Melson, 638 S.W.2d 342, 362
24 (Tenn. 1982); Houston v. State, 593 S.W.2d 267 (Tenn. 1980);
25 and Lockhart v. McCree, 476 U.S. 162, 106 S.Ct. 1758, 90 L.
26 Ed.2d 137 (1986).

28 As a part of this argument Defendant also specifi-
29 cally challenges the exclusion of prospective jurors Wilkins,
30 Ivey, Hicks and Cartwright because of their views on the

1 death penalty. In Wainwright v. Witt, 469 U.S. 412, 423, 105
2 S.Ct. 844, 851-852, 83 L. Ed.2d 841 (1985), the United States
3 Supreme Court held that a trial court may constitutionally
4 exclude from capital sentencing juries those jurors who are 5 unwilling or unable to obey the law or to follow their oath.
6 We have examined the record and find that the responses of 7 the excused prospective jurors supports the trial court's
8 decision to exclude them.

10 v
11

12 Defendant contends that the trial court erred
13 during voir dire in refusing to excuse prospective jurors
14 Trantham and Soileau for cause and in excusing prospective
15 jurors Hicks and Cartwright for cause.

16
17 We have read the voir dire examination of Trantham
18 and Soileau and find no error in the court's refusal to 19 excuse them for cause. Furthermore, even if there had been 20 error as to one of them, Defendant failed to exhaust his 21 peremptory challenges, having reserved one of the fifteen.
22 Since he was not forced to accept an incompetent juror and 23 did not exhaust his peremptory challenges, he is not entitled 24 to relief. Ross v. Oklahoma, 487 U.S. ___, 108 S.Ct. 2273, 25 101 L. Ed.2d 80 (1988); State v. Thompson, 768 S.W.2d 239, 26 246 (Tenn. 1989).

27
28 Our examination of the voir dire of prospective
29 jurors Hicks and Cartwright reveals no error under Wainwright
30 v. Witt, 105 S.Ct. at 852, in their excusal.

VI

3 Defendant avers that the trial court erred in 4 failing to exclude the testimony of the State's serologist.
5 He contends her testimony that spermatozoa consistent with 6 human spermatozoa were found on a sample from the victim's
7 underpants was irrelevant to the charge of first degree
8 murder absent an indictment for first degree murder in the 9 perpetration of rape. Rape, Defendant argues, was not a
10 material proposition during the guilt phase of this trial.
11 Even if relevant, Defendant avers, the prejudicial effect of 12 the testimony outweighed its probative value.

14 We find no merit to either argument. First,
15 although an indictment charges murder in the common law form
16 and does not specifically mention that the killing was 17 committed in the perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate,
18 one of the felonies named in the first degree murder statute,
19 the charge may be proven with evidence that the killing was 20 committed in perpetration of, or attempt to perpetrate, one
21 of these felonies. State v. Johnson, 661 S.W.2d 854, 860-861
22 (Tenn. 1983). Evidence tending to show rape was thus rele-
23 vant. Second, despite the inability of the pathologist to 24 say that a rape had occurred because of the condition of the 25 body and the inability of the serologist to determine how old
26 the spermatozoa were, the probative value of this evidence,
27 which supported Defendant's admissions he had raped the 28 victim, was not outweighed by its prejudicial effect. See 29 State v. Banks, 564 S.W.2d 947, 951-953 (Tenn. 1978).

Defendant alleges that the trial court erred in overruling his request for a DNA test. The Defendant sought an examination of the spermatozoa found on the victim's clothing for a DNA comparison with that of the Defendant. Defendant's request was first made at the hearing on the motion for a new trial at which time the oral request was denied. Defendant has not attempted to explain why this request was not made before trial or to present any evidence suggesting that a DNA test would produce admissible evidence. We find no merit to this issue.

VIII

In Defendant's next issue, he avers the trial court erred in admitting evidence relative to the condition of the decedent's body as found and particularly as to anything that occurred to the body subsequent to death. The Defendant says that evidence that the body had decomposed and had been disturbed by animals was irrelevant and, if relevant, that its probative value is outweighed by its prejudicial effect under State v. Banks, 564 S.W.2d at 951-953.

Testimony on these matters was relevant to explain, among other things, how the body had been moved from its original location, why there was no physical evidence of rape and why the exact cause of death could not be determined. It also indicated the length of time the victim had been dead. The testimony regarding these facts was restrained and in no way unnecessarily lurid or gruesome. No photographs of the body were shown to the jury. The trial judge did not err in admitting the testimony of Dr. Bass.

IX

Defendant next objects to as irrelevant Detective Schroeder's testimony at the guilt hearing that Defendant had told him that one way to get rid of a body was to feed it to pigs and that he wanted pictures of the body for his scrapbook. He also objects to admission of his statements about putting a body in a graveyard and the various places where authorities should search for bodies on the mountain. All of these statements are relevant to show malice and those concerning the location of the body evince a desire to mislead the authorities and to evade prosecution from which guilt may be inferred. See Marable v. State, 203 Tenn. 440, 313 S.W.2d 451, 459 (1958). The most questionable statement is that about the photographs for the Defendant's scrapbook, but any error here is clearly harmless in light of the proof. State v. Banks, 564 S.W.2d at 951-953.

Defendant avers that the trial court erred in failing to suppress statements made by Defendant to various jailhouse inmates. Defendant argues that the authorities violated his Sixth Amendment rights by using inmates to "interrogate" him. This argument has already been discussed in Issue I. As further grounds for suppression, Defendant,

1 at a jury out hearing at trial, presented the testimony of 2 three prisoners - Scholtz, Freeman and Green - who had been
3 incarcerated with him after his indictment, to the effect
4 that Detective Schroeder had asked Scholtz to wear a bug in 5 the cell with Defendant and had inquired if these prisoners
6 "knew anything on" the Defendant. Schroeder testified that 7 their testimony about the bug was false but that Scholtz on 8 his own had volunteered to wear a bug. Schroeder reiterated
9 that he had never asked any prisoner to elicit information
10 from the Defendant. The trial court found that there had 11 been no effort by the Sheriff's Department to solicit the 12 information and that the Department had simply "availed"
13 itself of listening to what the inmates had heard the Defen-
14 dant say; therefore, there was no constitutional violation.
15 The evidence does not preponderate against the finding of the 16 trial court. See State v. O'Guinn, 709 S.W.2d 561, 565
17 (Tenn. 1986).

18

20
21 The Defendant complains of the State's examination
22 of Pandora Edwards during which the Attorney General unsuc-
23 cessfully tried to elicit testimony that the Defendant had 24 said the victim was "a whore" and "deserved it." Despite the 25 prosecution's questions, Edwards persisted in testifying that 26 the Defendant had said nothing good or bad about the victim.
27 Defendant objected to this line of questioning, and after a 28 jury-out hearing, the trial court sustained the objection and 29 gave curative instructions to the effect that the prosecu-
30 tor's questions had been improper and should not be

1 considered. We find the prosecutor's questions improper;
2 however, we find his actions harmless beyond a reasonable
3 doubt. State v. Payne, ___ S.W.2d ___ (Tenn. 1990).

7 Defendant next argues that prejudicial prosecuto-
8 rial misconduct occurred during the State's cross-examination
9 of the Defendant when the Attorney General attempted to 10 dramatize areas of conflict in the testimony of the Defendant
11 and other witnesses. The trial judge sustained Defendant's
12 objections and at one point gave the jury a curative and 13 explanatory instruction on the unfairness of "blanket" type
14 questions. Defendant requested no mistrial. There was no
15 reversible error.

17 Finally, the Defendant complains about the State's 18 argument at the sentencing hearing that the victim had begged
19 for her life. In State v. Beasley, 536 S.W.2d 328 (Tenn.
20 1976), we held that a prosecutor's argument must be supported
21 by evidence introduced at trial and the reasonable inferences
22 to be drawn from that evidence. Contrary to Defendant's
23 assertion that there was no proof that the victim had begged
24 for her life, the testimony of Ernest Morrison that the 25 victim pleaded with Defendant fully supports this argument.
26 Id. at 330, State v. West, 767 S.W.2d 387, 394 (1989).

27

29
30

1 The Defendant contends that the instructions at the 2 guilt phase were erroneous. He challenges the instruction on 3 first degree murder because it included a partial definition
4 of felony murder, i.e., the instruction tracked the statutory 5 language of T.C.A. §39-2-202(a), but did not define for the 6 jury the felony upon which a first degree murder conviction
7 could be based, here rape. It is clear there was no error in 8 instructing the jury on felony murder under the indictment 9 although separate counts on that charge would have been 10 preferable. See State v. Barnes, 703 S.W.2d 611, 615 (Tenn.
11 1985). It is erroneous, however, for the trial court in such 12 cases to omit a definition of the felony alleged to support
13 first degree murder. The words defining the offense of first
14 degree murder have a technical meaning and it is the trial
15 court's duty to give such meaning to the jury in the charge
16 and not merely to use the language of the statute. Poole v.
17 State, 61 Tenn. 288, 293-294 (1872); see also T.P.I. Crim.
18 20.02. Rape as a basis for a first degree murder conviction
19 was a theory presented to the jury in this case.

20
21 While the Defendant did object to charging felony
22 murder under the indictment and raised this as an issue on 23 his motion for a new trial, he did not specifically object to 24 the omission of the definition of rape in the charge or 25 request additional instructions on this point. When told by 26 the trial judge before the charge, that the court intended
27 only to instruct the first degree murder statute, Defendant
28 made no objection. While there is authority that mere 29 meagerness of the charge under such circumstances is not 30 reversible error in the absence for a request for an

1 additional charge, see Haynes v. State, 720 S.W.2d 76, 85
2 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1986), a defendant has a constitutional
3 right to a correct and complete charge of the law. State v.
4 Staggs, 554 S.W.2d 620, 626 (Tenn. 1977); State v. Lee, 618
5 S.W.2d 320, 323 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1981). The charge here
6 omitted is one that is fundamental in nature, essential to a 7 fair trial, so that the failure to request that rape be
8 defined does not preclude a finding of error. See State v.
9 Martin, 702 S.W.2d 560, 563-564 (Tenn. 1985); Pope v. State, 10 212 Tenn. 413, 370 S.W.2d 488, 489 (1963). It is the duty of 11 the trial judge without request to give the jury proper 12 instructions as to the law governing the issues raised by the 13 nature of the proceedings and the evidence introduced during 14 trial, and simply reading a statute to the jury when the 15 statute contains words requiring clarification does not 16 satisfy "the demands of justice" or the defendant's consti-
17 tutional right to trial by jury. State v. McAfee, 737 S.W.2d
18 304, 308 (Tenn. Crim. App. 1987).

19
20
21 The law is unsettled as to whether harmless error
22 analysis is available when a trial court fails to instruct on 23 an essential element of an offense. See, e.g., Polsky v.
24 Patton, 890 F.2d 647, 651 (3d Cir. 1989); Hoover v. Garfield
25 Heights Municipal Court, 802 F.2d 168, 175-178 (6th Cir.
26 1986), cert. denied 480 U.S. 949, 107 S.Ct. 1610, 94 L.Ed.2d
27 796 (1987). Harmless error analysis has been applied,
28 however, where the trial court has failed to define a sepa-
29 rate felony which is an essential element of the felony with 30 which a defendant is charged. For example, in State v. Lee,

1 618 S.W.2d at 323, the court held that the trial court's
2 failure to define "murder" in a case involving a charge of 3 solicitation to commit first degree murder was error harmless
4 beyond a reasonable doubt. In Bell v. Watkins, 692 F.2d 999,
5 1005-1006 (5th Cir. 1982) cert. denied 464 U.S. 843, 104
6 S.Ct. 142, 78 L. Ed.2d 134 (1983), the Fifth Circuit held
7 that the trial court's failure to define the felonies of 8 kidnapping and armed robbery underlying a charge of capital
9 murder was harmless error under Chapman v. California, 386
10 U.S. 18, 87 S.Ct. 824, 17 L. Ed.2d 705 (1967). In most cases
11 where the courts have rejected a harmless error analysis, the 12 omission from the instruction, unlike that in the present
13 case, prevented the jury from considering a material issue so
14 that the trial court's failure to instruct was the equivalent
15 of a directed verdict. See Hoover v. Garfield Heights
16 Municipal Court, 802 F.2d at 177.

18 In the present case the jury returned a verdict
19 that the Defendant was "guilty of murder in the first de-20 gree." The jury was completely and correctly instructed as 21 to the elements of first degree, common-law, premeditated
22 murder, and the evidence is clearly sufficient to support a
23 conviction on this charge. Also, at the sentencing phase,
24 without the presentation of any evidence additional to that 25 presented at the guilt phase, the same jury was fully in-
26 structed on the elements of rape in connection with aggra-
27 vating circumstance (1)(7) and in its sentencing decision,
28 only a short time after its decision as to guilt, expressly 29 found beyond a reasonable doubt that the murder had been 30 committed in the perpetration of rape. Cf. State v. Carter,

1 714 S.W.2d 241, 250 (Tenn. 1986). For these reasons, we are
2 of the opinion that the omission of the definition of rape in 3 the first degree murder charge, in the unique circumstances
4 and total context of this case, is harmless error beyond a
5 reasonable doubt.

7 Finally, the Defendant complains that a portion of 8 the malice instructions created a presumption of malice in 9 violation of Sandstrom v. Montana, 442 U.S. 10, 99 S.Ct.
10 2450, 61 L. Ed.2d 39 (1979). The malice instruction in this 11 case speaks only of an inference of malice. It neither 12 presumes malice nor requires the inference to be drawn.
13 There is no Sandstrom error. See State v. Martin, 702 S.W.2d
14 560; State v. Bolin, 678 S.E.2d 40, 44-45 (Tenn. 1984).

16 XIV

18 Defendant's next issue is whether the aggravating
19 circumstance found by the jury is proper and supported by the 20 evidence. The jury was instructed as to two statutory 21 aggravating circumstances, T.C.A. § 39-2-203(1)(5) and (7).<sup>1</sup>
22 The verdict form used in this case specified that "the jury
23 must verbatim write and specifically list below . . . the 24

25 <sup>1</sup> T.C.A. §39-2-203(1)(5) sets forth the aggravating
26 circumstance that the "murder was especially heinous,
27 atrocious, or cruel in that it involved torture or depravity
28 of mind." Section 39-2-203(1)(7) states the aggravating
29 circumstance that the murder was committed while the 30 defendant was "engaged in committing, or was an accomplice in the commission of, or was attempting to commit, or was fleeing after committing or attempting to commit" certain listed felonies, in this case rape.

1 particular statutory circumstance or circumstances found by 2 the jury," and the charge included the instruction that "the 3 jury must include and reduce to writing the specific aggra-
4 vating circumstance or circumstances so found." Neverthe-
5 less, the jury returned as its aggravating circumstance the 6 following: "The murder was especially heinous, atrocious in 7 that it involved depravity of mind while the Defendant was 8 engaged in committing rape." This was a finding not in 9 strict compliance with the instructions. However, the 10 statute makes no requirement of a verbatim statement of the 11 aggravating circumstances. See T.C.A. §39-2-203(g). The 12 finding of the jury is sufficient to comply with the statute
13 in that the aggravating circumstances found are clearly those 14 allowed by the statute and permit effective appellate review
15 of the sentence. Cf. State v. Henley, 774 S.W.2d 908, 917
16 (Tenn. 1989).

17
18 Defendant argues that the aggravating circumstance
19 in (i)(7) was not supported by the proof because the jury's
20 finding of rape was not supported by the evidence. There is 21 no merit to this argument. The Defendant's confession of 22 rape to two fellow prisoners corroborated by the presence of 23 human spermatozoa on the victim's clothing, the location of 24 her pants and underpants away from the body, and the posi-
25 tioning of her jacket and brassiere over her neck and head,
26 is sufficient to support the finding that the murder occurred
27 during the commission of a rape.

28
29 XV
30

1 The Defendant avers that the evidence was not
2 sufficient to support the conviction and the sentence. Where 3 the sufficiency of evidence is challenged, the relevant
4 question for an appellate court is whether, after viewing the 5 evidence in the light most favorable to the State, any 6 rational trier of fact could have found the essential ele-
7 ments of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt. Findings of 8 guilt shall be set aside only if the evidence is insufficient
9 to support this finding. T.R.A.P. 13(e); Jackson v. Virgin-
10 ia, 443 U.S. 370, 99 S.Ct. 2781, 61 L. Ed.2d 560 (1979).

11
12 A jury verdict approved by the trial judge accred-
13 its the testimony of the witnesses for the State and resolves
14 all conflicts in favor of the State's theory. State v.
15 Williams, 657 S.W.2d 405, 410 (Tenn. 1983). On appeal the 16 State is entitled to the strongest legitimate view of the 17 evidence and all reasonable or legitimate inferences which 18 may be drawn therefrom. State v. Cabbage, 571 S.W.2d 835
19 (Tenn. 1978).

21

22 We are of the opinion that the evidence is suffi-
23 cient to support a finding that the Defendant was guilty of 24 first degree murder. The proof established that the Defen-
25 dant was the last person seen with Tara Stowe on the night
26 she disappeared and that he was seen shortly thereafter
27 wearing a class ring which had been in her possession. He 28 lured her into a secluded area on the pretense that her 29 boyfriend was waiting there for her. When Tim Sexton drove 30 the Defendant and Tara up Murphy Hollow Road and asked to go

1 with them, the Defendant refused. Tara's boyfriend, James
2 Dagnun, was actually in Trenton, Georgia, at that time.

4 Before he was arrested, the Defendant made state-
5 ments to acquaintances which incriminated him. Four days
6 after the disappearance, he asked John Dagnun if he thought
7 the Defendant had hurt Tara. He told Tim Sexton that Tara
8 had given him the ring which she was wearing the night she 9 disappeared. He asked Ronnie Nunley if he wanted a "bone
10 from Tara". The Defendant admitted raping Tara to two fellow 11 prisoners. Several others overheard the Defendant admit to 12 the murder.
13

15

16 Regarding sentencing, the Defendant challenges the 17 sufficiency of the evidence to support a finding of depravity
18 necessary to support aggravating circumstance (1)(5). The 19 proof here amply supports a finding of depravity. Cf. State
20 v. Cooper, 718 S.W.2d 256, 259-260 (1986) (defendant's
21 feelings of fright and helplessness supported finding of 22 torture and depravity); State v. Hartman, 703 S.W.2d 106, 119
23 (Tenn. 1985) (abduction and vicious rape of victim in remote 24 wooded area created a jury issue on torture and depravity);
25 see also State v. House, 743 S.W.2d 141 (Tenn. 1987) (evi-
26 dence supported this circumstance where defendant lured
27 victim from home at night under pretense that her husband had 28 been in automobile wreck only to assault, rape and murder 29 her).
30

3 The Defendant, in his final issue, questions the 4 constitutionality of the Tennessee death penalty statute.
5 The Defendant contends that the aggravating circumstance
6 found in 39-2-203(1)(5) (the murder was especially heinous,
7 atrocious or cruel in that it involved torture or depravity
8 of mind) is unconstitutionally vague and overbroad under the 9 recent United States Supreme Court decision of Maynard v.
10 Cartwright, 486 U.S. ___, 108 S.Ct. 1853, 100 L. Ed.2d 372
11 (1988). This identical argument was addressed and rejected
12 in our recent decision of State v. Thompson, 768 S.W.2d 239
13 (Tenn. 1989). See also Clemons v. Mississippi, ___ U.S. ___, 14 110 S.Ct. 1441, 1449-1450, 1451, ___ L.Ed.2d ___ (1990)
15 (impliedly approving Mississippi Supreme Court's construction 16 of "especially heinous" as limited to "conscienceless or 17 pitiless and unnecessarily torturous").
18

19 The Defendant also argues that the court's charge
20 at sentencing informing the jury of all eight statutory 21 mitigating circumstances was error under State and Federal 22 law. While this Court has held that only those mitigating
23 circumstances raised by the evidence should be charged, State
24 v. Buck, 670 S.W.2d 600, 608 (Tenn. 1984), in the absence of 25 a showing of prejudice, this error would generally benefit
26 the Defendant and does not require reversal. See State v.
27 Carter, 714 S.W.2d at 251 (Tenn. 1986). Defendant next 28 argues that the failure of the instructions to limit the 29 mitigating factors that the jury may consider results in the 30 sentencer's unchanneled discretion contrary to Godfrey v.

1 Georgia, 446 U.S. 420, 100 S.Ct. 1759, 64 L. Ed.2d 398
2 (1980). Since the rule is clear, however, that a sentencer
3 at a capital trial may not be precluded from considering any 4 relevant mitigating evidence, see Skipper v. South Carolina,
5 476 U.S. 1, 106 S.Ct. 1669, 1670-1671, 90 L. Ed.2d 1 (1986),
6 there is no merit to this argument.

8 Defendant also asserts that the statute's failure
9 to require the jury to list the mitigating circumstances it
10 finds prevents adequate appellate review. The United States
11 Supreme Court recently rejected this very argument in Clemons
12 v. Mississippi, 110 S.Ct. at 1449. The Defendant's final 13 argument is that the Tennessee statute, specifically T.C.A.
14 §39-2-203 (f), requires the sentencer to unanimously deter-
15 mine the existence of a mitigating circumstance before the 16 jury may consider it contrary to the dictates of Mills v.
17 Maryland, 486 U.S. ___, 100 S.Ct. 1860, 100 L. Ed.2d 384
18 (1988). Under the Tennessee statute, which contains none of 19 the features found objectionable in Mills, the jury need not 20 agree upon the existence of any mitigating factors and each
21 individual juror is free to consider any circumstances he or 22 she may deem mitigating in reaching a decision. State v.
23 Thompson, 768 S.W.2d at 250-252.

25 We have reviewed the sentence of death in accord
26 with the mandates of T.C.A. §39-2-205 and are satisfied that 27 the evidence warrants imposition of that penalty. Our 28 comparative proportionality review convinces us that the 29 sentence of death is neither excessive nor disproportionate
30 to the penalty imposed in similar cases, considering both the

1 nature of the crime and the Defendant. See, e.g., State v.
2 House, 743 S.W.2d 141; State v. Hartman, 703 S.W.2d 106.
3 The sentence of death will be carried out as provided by law

S/C No. 88-57-I

ORDER ON PETITION TO REHEAR

The Defendant-Appellant, Homer B. Teel, has filed a Petition to Rehear in the above-captioned case. After careful consideration, the Court is of the opinion that the Petition to Rehear is not well taken and the same is denied at the cost of Appellant.

The Appellant has also filed in this Court a Motion to Stay Execution, which has been set for July 24, 1990. Appellant states in his motion that he contemplates filing a petition for certiorari with the United States Supreme Court. Upon consideration of the motion, the Court stays the execution presently set for July 24, 1990, and reschedules the execution date for September 14, 1990. This 9th day of July, 1990.

ORDER OVERRULING MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

This cause came on for hearing on the 1st day of June, 1988, before the Honorable Buddy Perry, Circuit Judge, upon defendant's motion for a new trial, and after hearing argument of counsel and considering all of the record in this cause and especially defendant's motion for a new trial, the Court was of the opinion that said motion should be in all things overruled.

IT IS, THEREFORE, ORDERED, ADJUDGED AND DECREED that defendant's motion for a new trial be and the same is herein in all things overruled.

ORDER

Various motions came on for hearing before the Honorable Buddy Perry, District Judge, on the 1st day of June, 1988. The Defendant's counsel had previously presented orally to the Court on September 21, 1987, a motion requesting the Court to compel the State of Tennessee to have a qualified person examine the hair samples in the possession of Dr. King relative to this case, which was testified to by Dr. King at the trial of this case and that said hair samples be compared with hair samples of the Defendant, which the Defendant has agreed to be taken.

Additionally, the Defendant's counsel orally moved on June 1, 1988, that a DNA test be conducted and that a comparison be made of his spermatozoa with that of the spermatozoa found by the State's Serologist, Julia Merry, when examining certain clothing that was presented to her by the State in this case. The Defendant acknowledged that he would voluntarily submit such a sample for comparison purposes.

The Court upon hearing the argument of counsel and based upon the entire record in this cause does grant the Defendant's Motion relative to comparison of hair samples and does deny his motion relative to a DNA test and comparison of spermatozoa.

IT IS ACCORDINGLY ORDERED that the State of Tennessee cause a qualified person to examine the hair samples in the possession of Dr. King relative to this case, which were testified to by Dr. King at the trial of this case and that said hair samples be compared with hair samples of the Defendant, Homer Butch Teel. The obligation of the State in this regard is conditioned upon Homer Butch Teel voluntarily consenting to the appropriate removal of hair follicles from his head and pubic area for comparison purposes.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the results of said analysis be reported to this Court within a reasonable period of time.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that the Defendant's Motion relative to a DNA test and a comparison of his spermatozoa with that testified to by the State Serologist, Julia Merry, as having been located on the victim's clothing be and the same is hereby denied.

Upon request of the Defendant, the Court's action in denying his motion for a DNA test and comparison of spermatozoa should be considered as an additional complaint of error in his Motion for New Trial which shall be reviewed by the appropriate Appellate Court since said new trial motion has been overruled.

ENTER, this the 9 day of June, 1988, to be effective as of June 1, 1988.

RESPONDENT'S BRIEF IN OPPOSITION TO THE

The petitioner, Homer B. Teel, has filed a petition for writ of certiorari to the Supreme Court of Tennessee. The respondent, the State of Tennessee, respectfully submits this response to the petition.

The Opinion of the Supreme Court of Tennessee is attached to the petition.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the Supreme Court of Tennessee was entered on May 29, 1990. On July 9, 1990, the Supreme Court of Tennessee denied the petition to rehear. On October 4, 1990, the petitioner filed his petition for writ of certiorari.

The petitioner seeks to invoke the jurisdiction of this Court under 28 U.S.C. §1257 and 28 U.S.C. §2101.

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

I. Whether the application of harmless error analysis to an error in the jury instructions presents a substantial constitutional question.

II. Whether this Court should consider an issue which was not properly raised in the Court below.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The petitioner, Homer B. Teel, was convicted by a jury of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death by electrocution. The Supreme Court of Tennessee affirmed the conviction and sentence on direct appeal. Petition, Appendix A-1. On June 28, 1990, the petitioner filed a petition to rehear. On July 9, 1990, the Supreme Court of Tennessee denied the petition to rehear.

SUMMARY OF THE ARGUMENT

I. At the guilt stage of the trial, the court failed to define the elements of rape in its felony-murder instructions. The petitioner does not assert that the deficient instructions violated his constitutional rights. He questions only whether harmless error analysis may be applied to an error raised and decided under state law. Harmless error analysis is a federal question only when the underlying error violates federal constitutional rights.

The proof established without question the elements of rape as well as first degree murder in common-law form, which was charged to the jury. The jury was instructed upon the elements of rape at the sentencing hearing and found beyond a reasonable doubt, without additional proof, that the murder occurred in the perpetration of a rape. The trial court's failure to define "rape" in the felony-murder instructions did not affect the verdict.

II. Evidence that the victim had hair in her hand was developed during the petitioner's cross-examination of the medical examiner. The trial court ordered analysis of the hair, but denied the motion for a new trial. The petitioner addressed this claim below only as a factor regarding sufficiency of the evidence. The record does not reflect whether the petitioner satisfied his obligation to provide hair samples for analysis.

I. THE APPLICATION OF HARMLESS ERROR ANALYSIS TO AN ERROR IN THE JURY INSTRUCTIONS FAILS TO PRESENT A SUBSTANTIAL CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTION.

The petitioner complains that the Supreme Court of Tennessee erred by applying harmless error analysis to the trial court's failure to define, in its felony-murder instructions, the elements of rape. Although the petitioner failed to object at trial, the Court examined the merits of the complaint. Petition, Appendix A-1, pp. 25-26. The Court then held that the failure to define the underlying felony of rape was error, but harmless beyond a reasonable doubt under the facts and circumstances of this case. Petition, Appendix A-1, pp. 26-28.

Initially, the respondent notes that the petitioner has failed to present the merits of this claim as an issue of federal constitutional law. His brief in the Supreme Court of Tennessee cited only the case of State v. Thompson, 519 S.W.2d 789, 792 (Tenn. 1975). Appendix A. In addressing the merits of this claim, the Court found a constitutional right to a correct and complete charge of the law, relying exclusively upon state case law. Petition, Appendix A-1, p. 26. The cases cited by the Court in its opinion did not rely upon federal case authority or engage in federal constitutional analysis. Since neither the petitioner nor the Supreme Court of Tennessee addressed the merits of this issue as a federal constitutional question, the petition for the writ of certiorari should be denied.

In this Court, the petitioner asserts no claim that the deficiencies in the jury instructions violated his federal constitutional rights. He merely asserts that error occurred because the state court found error. Since the petitioner has failed to present the merits of his claim as a federal constitutional issue, the petition should be denied.

The Supreme Court of Tennessee relied upon federal authority and held that the error was harmless. Petition, Appendix A-1, p. 27. Although the Court may have adopted the federal standard when it found that the state law error was harmless, the application of that standard is of no consequence in this Court unless the petitioner raises a federal constitutional claim as to the merits of the issue. The applicability of harmless error analysis is a federal question only when the alleged error is a violation of federal constitutional rights. Chapman v. California, 386 U.S. 18 (1967). The petitioner is asking this Court to consider whether an assignment of error which was raised and sustained under state law may be regarded as harmless. Since this fails to present a federal question, the petition should be denied.

The proof established that the petitioner's fourteen-year old victim was found dead with her jacket, bra

and blouse pulled up over her head. Petition, Appendix A-2, p. 5. After luring this child into a secluded area on a pretext, the petitioner forced her to perform fellatio. He stripped her of her pants and panties and forced sexual intercourse upon her. After forcing her to kneel and perform fellatio again, the petitioner pushed her to the ground, forced her head into a creek and drowned her. Petition, Appendix A-2, pp. 7-8. Without question, the proof established the elements of rape. The proof further established guilt of first degree murder in common-law form, which was correctly charged to the jury.

There is no question that the jury would have convicted the petitioner of either common law murder or felony murder. The jury was accurately instructed upon the elements of rape at the sentencing hearing. Without further proof, the jury found beyond a reasonable doubt that the murder was committed in the perpetration of rape. There is no reason to rule that the jury would have found otherwise at the first stage of the trial if the petitioner had requested and obtained an instruction defining "rape." Since the omission did not affect the outcome of the proceeding, the Supreme Court of Tennessee properly found that the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Petition, Appendix A-1, pp. 27-28.

II. THIS COURT SHOULD NOT CONSIDER AN ISSUE WHICH WAS NOT PROPERLY RAISED IN THE SUPREME COURT OF TENNESSEE.

In his second issue, the petitioner asserts that the Supreme Court of Tennessee failed to give "significance" to the trial court's order for the analysis of hair found in the victim's hand. This evidence was discovered at trial during cross-examination of the medical examiner by the petitioner. In his appellate brief, the petitioner argued this point only as a factor to consider in assessing the sufficiency of the evidence. Appendix B. The Supreme Court of Tennessee found that the evidence at trial was sufficient to support the conviction and sentence under the standard set forth in Jackson v. Virginia, 443 U.S. 370 (1979). Petition, Appendix A-2, p. 30. Since the petitioner's second issue was not presented to the courts of Tennessee as a separate issue or a federal constitutional claim, the petition for the writ of certiorari should be denied.

Contrary to the petitioner's assertion, this issue does not impair the finality of his conviction or sentence. Since the trial court ordered analysis at the same time he denied the motion for a new trial, he obviously intended only to grant the petitioner the means to explore any newly discovered evidence or to silence a potential issue. As explained below, the petitioner shaved his head rather than provide hair samples for analysis. If the petitioner is genuinely interested in the merit of this issue, he should provide samples of his hair as ordered. If the analysis produces exculpatory evidence, this new evidence may be presented to the trial court by a writ of error coram nobis, Tenn. Code Ann. § 40-26-105, or by a petition for post-conviction relief, Tenn. Code Ann. § 40-30-101 et seq.

Under the facts and circumstances of this case, the petitioner has no basis to complain that the trial court's order has been ignored by the State. Petition, pp. 14-15. The trial court expressly conditioned his order upon the petitioner's voluntary consent "to the appropriate removal of hair follicles from his head and pubic area for comparison purposes." Petition, Appendix A-5, p. 2. There is nothing in the record which shows that the petitioner complied with his obligation to provide appropriate samples or that the State has precluded him from doing so.*

An issue which merits the attention of this Court merits fair presentation to the courts of Tennessee. Since the petitioner has failed to fairly present this issue to the state courts, the petition for the writ of certiorari should be denied.

* It was disclosed at oral argument before the Supreme Court of Tennessee that the State had made arrangements to collect hair samples from the petitioner, who thwarted collection by shaving his head.

CONCLUSION

For these reasons, the State of Tennessee submits that the petition for a writ of certiorari should be denied.

the Supreme Court of Tennessee.

Appendix B - Page 106 of the petitioner's brief on appeal in the Supreme Court of Tennessee.

Even assuming arguendo that the felony murder charge would be appropriate in the subject case, Appellant points out that the Trial Court failed to define the crime of rape in the charge during the guilt-innocence phase. Appellant submits that such an omission is fatal. As a matter of fundamental fairness, if the felony murder charge was appropriate in this case, then the jury certainly should have been advised as to the definition of rape including all elements thereof. The duty of the Trial Judge in this regard as set out by this Honorable Supreme Court in the case of State v. Thompson, 519 S.W.2d 789 at p. 792 (Tenn. S.Ct. 1975) is as follows:

The general principle in criminal cases is that there is a duty upon the trial judge to give a complete charge of the law applicable to the facts of the case and the defendant has a right to have every issue of fact raised by the evidence and material to his defense submitted to the jury upon proper instructions by the judge. (Citations omitted)

Even though not specifically brought out at the Motion for New Trial, Appellant points out to this Honorable Court that a portion of the malice instruction set forth aforesaid with the felony murder instruction creates a presumption of malice that has the effect of either eliminating intent as an issue, or of shifting the burden of that the Defendant was engaged in committing rape, and this is evidenced by the finding of the jury during the sentencing phase (TE, Vol. 13, p. 1257, EX #19, p. 6).

There was no proof of motive, premeditation, deliberation, willfulness, maliciousness, or that the Defendant killed the alleged victim. From the proof presented by the State in this case, no rational trier of facts could have found the essential elements of the crime beyond a reasonable doubt.

The action of the Trial Court in sustaining the Defendant's request for a comparison of hair samples found in the decedent's hand with hair of the Defendant (TR, pp. 71-72) is indicative of the existence of reasonable doubt. This further shows that the Trial Judge must have some reservations about the sufficiency of the evidence and the jury verdict. In accord with a previous decision by this Court in the case of Messer v. State, 385 S.W.2d 98 (Tenn. S.Ct. 1964), as perhaps modified by the case of State v. Cabbage, 571 S.W.2d 832 (Tenn. S.Ct. 1978), the jury verdict of first degree murder should be set aside.

As to the sentencing phase, the Defendant again relies upon the argument submitted relative to Issue XIV hereinbefore, and in addition thereto refers this Honorable Court to another first degree murder case out of Marion County, styled State v. Pritchett, 621 S.W.2d 127 (Tenn.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

HOMER B. TEEL v. TENNESSEE

ON PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI TO THE SUPREME COURT OF TENNESSEE, MIDDLE DIVISION

No. 90-5887. Decided December 3, 1990

The petition for a writ of certiorari is denied.

JUSTICE WHITE, with whom JUSTICE MARSHALL joins, dissenting.

This case presents the question of whether harmless error analysis applies when a jury is not instructed on an essential element of the offense. Petitioner was convicted of first degree murder for the rape and killing of Tara Stowe. During the guilt phase, the trial court charged the jury as to both premeditated murder and felony murder yet failed to give a definition of rape under state law. The jury returned a general verdict of guilty. On appeal, the Tennessee Supreme Court held that it was error to omit a definition of the felony alleged to support first degree murder. State v. Teel, S/C No. 88-57-I (Tenn. May 29, 1990), p. 25. The court further held that the omitted charge was so "fundamental in nature" that petitioner's failure to request a definition of rape at trial did not preclude a finding of error. Id., at 25-26. After noting that "the law is unsettled as to whether harmless error analysis is available when a trial court fails to instruct on an essential element of an offense," the court concluded that the omission of a rape instruction here was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. Id., at 26, 26-28. The court reasoned that the evidence was sufficient to sustain a conviction on the properly instructed charge of premeditated murder and that the same jury received a complete instruction as to the elements of rape as an aggravating circumstance during the sentencing phase. Id., at 27-28. Having rejected this and numerous other contentions, the court affirmed the conviction and death sentence.

As the Tennessee Supreme Court noted, a conflict of authority exists concerning the availability of harmless error analysis in this situation. Several courts of appeal have held that error resulting from a failure to give proper instructions on the essential elements of an offense cannot be harmless. Hoover v. Garfield Heights Municipal Court, 802 F. 2d 168, 175-79 (CA6 1986); United States v. Howard, 506 F. 2d 1131, 1133-34 (CA2 1974); United States v. Gaither, 440 F. 2d 262, 264 (CA9 1971). Others have held that harmless error analysis can apply. Redding v. Benson, 739 F. 2d 1360 (CA8 1984), cert. denied 469 U. S. 1222 (1985); Bell v. Watkins, 692 F. 2d 999, 1004 (CA5 1982); United States v. Brown, 616 F. 2d 725, 729 (CA9 1979). The depth of this conflict underscores the importance of the question. Both considerations counsel for a grant of certiorari.

JUSTICE MARSHALL, dissenting.

Adhering to my view that the death penalty is in all circumstances cruel and unusual punishment prohibited by the Eighth and Fourteenth Amendments, Gregg v. Georgia, 428 U. S. 153, 231 (1976), I would grant the petition and vacate the death sentence in this case even if I did not regard the petition as presenting a question independently meriting this Court's review.
